

BBC 6 Minute English Listening Practice

Children in War Zones

Name: _____

Class: _____

Score: _____ / 20

No.	Sentence
1	In 2024, _____ children were living in conflict zones.
2	This represented about one in _____ children across the world.
3	The reporter grew up with an _____.
4	Although researchers differ on some issues, they have _____ on one key point.
5	Recovery from war trauma is not possible while a child is still experiencing _____.
6	A relatively new approach recommends a pace that is _____.
7	Children should not be made to confront _____ again.
8	Instead, they may begin with an everyday step such as learning to _____.
9	During the war, constant fear had led some children to sleep with _____.
10	If they are given a chance, children can show remarkable _____.

11 What is the main significance of the 2024 figure given at the start of the discussion?

- A It identifies the age group most likely to develop war-related stress.
- B It shows that conflict affects a substantial share of the world's children.
- C It compares the effects of conflict across several different countries.
- D It suggests that the number of children in conflict zones is falling.

12 Why is the reporter's family background introduced?

- A To show that he began reporting from dangerous places as a child.
- B To explain how his father trained him to recognise physical danger.
- C To prove that he avoided reporting on children because of his past.
- D To raise the possibility that childhood trauma influenced his reporting.

Answers written in the margins will not be marked.

Answers written in the margins will not be marked.

- 13 What best describes the reporter's behaviour from a very young age?
- A He continually checked his surroundings for possible threats.
 - B He concentrated mainly on disagreements among researchers.
 - C He reacted only after a real danger had already appeared.
 - D He remained calm by staying physically close to a parent.
- 14 According to the researchers' shared view, what prevents recovery from war trauma?
- A Discussing traumatic experiences before conducting more research.
 - B Failing to agree on every finding about children in war zones.
 - C Remaining exposed to traumatic conditions while trying to recover.
 - D Starting with ordinary routines instead of confronting major events.
- 15 How are the researchers' views contrasted?
- A They agree about children's experiences but differ over possible treatments.
 - B They differ on some matters but agree on a condition necessary for recovery.
 - C They once supported gradual recovery but now prefer immediate confrontation.
 - D They share a general theory but disagree about whether trauma can continue.
- 16 What principle underlies the relatively new approach to helping affected children?
- A Begin carefully with manageable activities linked to their fears.
 - B Recreate the worst events so children can face them directly.
 - C Separate children from their parents as quickly as possible.
 - D Treat ordinary sleep problems as unrelated to wartime experiences.
- 17 Why had some children become used to sleeping with a parent during the war?
- A Researchers had advised families that this would speed up recovery.
 - B The children had experienced ordinary nightmares without lasting trauma.
 - C Parents wanted to prepare them to confront violent events again.
 - D Persistent terror had changed the children's normal sleeping habits.
- 18 What can be inferred from the comparison with a child who has had a nightmare?
- A Nightmares are the main cause of trauma among children in war zones.
 - B Children without trauma usually find it impossible to sleep alone.
 - C A simple-looking step may still demand considerable effort from a child.
 - D Parents can remove wartime trauma by treating it like a bad dream.

- 19 What is the purpose of the example of learning to sleep alone?
- A To illustrate how the effects of wartime fear can remain in everyday behaviour.
 - B To establish a rule that every traumatised child must follow at home.
 - C To show that sleep difficulties are more serious than all other effects of war.
 - D To suggest that practical routines can replace all professional support.
- 20 What overall conclusion does the reporter draw about children affected by severe hardship?
- A Their recovery happens naturally once the conflict itself has ended.
 - B Their positive attitude prevents difficult experiences from affecting them.
 - C Their ability to recover is weaker than that of the human spirit generally.
 - D Their capacity to recover can be exceptional when they are given an opportunity.