According to Anita Rani, which of the following best describes what the manosphere promotes as indicators of a man's value?

- A Financial independence, physical fitness, emotional openness, and leadership
- B Emotional restraint, material success, physical looks, and control over others
- C Social influence, intellectual ability, career achievement, and self-discipline
- D Psychological strength, online presence, competitive drive, and peer respect

What does Phil suggest about the way manosphere content reaches its audience?

- A It is distributed through a dedicated website targeting vulnerable teenagers
- B It is broadcast via mainstream television programmes aimed at young adults
- C It is shared through official men's organisations with structured membership
- D It spreads through social media platforms and online videos without a central hub

Why did Will Adolphy consider himself particularly susceptible to manosphere ideas during his teenage years?

- A His unconventional interests set him apart and left him open to being exploited
- B His academic struggles made him seek validation from online communities instead
- C His lack of male role models pushed him towards influencers for life guidance
- D His desire for fame as an actor made him vulnerable to social media manipulation

In the context of Will's behaviour at age 14, what does his use of "bravado" most closely suggest?

- A He genuinely developed confidence after receiving encouragement from his peers
- B He openly rejected social expectations and embraced his artistic identity proudly
- C He projected a false image of toughness that concealed his actual inner struggles
- D He consciously chose to follow masculine ideals after careful personal reflection

What was Will's emotional state when he first encountered manosphere influencers online?

- A He was sceptical of their claims but continued watching out of intellectual curiosity
- B He was receptive because their messages seemed to confirm his real-life frustrations
- C He was indifferent at first but gradually became convinced by repeated exposure
- D He was enthusiastic about self-improvement and sought out motivational content

According to Will, what impact did prolonged exposure to manosphere content have on his perception of reality?

- A It warped his understanding of the world into a distorted and adversarial perspective
- B It motivated him to improve himself by addressing his personal weaknesses directly
- C It gradually helped him identify the social injustices that men genuinely experience
- D It encouraged him to distance himself from toxic relationships in his personal life

When Phil explains that Will "painted everyone with the same brush," what does this idiom imply about Will's thinking?

- A Will carefully analysed each person's behaviour before forming a negative judgement
- B Will expressed his frustration through creative outlets such as writing and painting
- C Will selectively targeted specific groups he believed were responsible for his problems
- D Will unfairly attributed the same negative traits to all people based on a few examples

Based on the description of Will's "us versus them" mindset, what can be inferred about how he viewed women and the mainstream media?

- A He regarded them as misguided but ultimately willing to understand men's struggles
- B He saw them as irrelevant to his personal difficulties and largely ignored their views
- C He perceived them as active opponents deliberately working to diminish male influence
- D He considered them to be victims of the same social pressures that affected young men

What can be inferred about the circumstances under which Will eventually disengaged from the manosphere?

- A He left after a trusted mentor helped him critically evaluate the content he consumed
- B He withdrew voluntarily once he recognised the harmful nature of the ideology himself
- C He was guided out by a school counsellor who intervened during his teenage years
- D His departure came only after his mental wellbeing had already seriously deteriorated

What is Will Adolphy's primary purpose in visiting schools across the UK after his recovery?

- A To warn educators about the dangers of unrestricted internet access for young people
- B To encourage young people to maintain a critical and questioning attitude toward online content
- C To promote mental health awareness by sharing clinical research on social media addiction
- D To advocate for government regulation of influencer content on social media platforms
