

SET

6

diagnosis

statistical partial candidate

identification

vowel

node

intensity

equilibrium

regression

| No. | Sentence                                                                                                                        |
|-----|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 1   | The report used advanced _____ methods to estimate how income, education, and location influenced voting behaviour.             |
| 2   | In English, the sound /i / is a long _____, as in the words "see" and "machine".                                                |
| 3   | After several hours, the chemical reaction reached _____, meaning the forward and reverse processes occurred at equal rates.    |
| 4   | The _____ of the earthquake was so great that buildings hundreds of kilometres away still shook slightly.                       |
| 5   | The economist used linear _____ to examine whether housing prices could be predicted from interest rates and population growth. |
| 6   | An early _____ allowed doctors to begin treatment before the infection spread to the patient's lungs.                           |
| 7   | Biometric _____ systems can recognise individuals by comparing fingerprints, facial features, or patterns in the iris.          |
| 8   | Each _____ in the network stores information and passes signals to neighbouring units when certain conditions are met.          |
| 9   | The leading _____ promised to reform education, but critics questioned whether her plan was financially realistic.              |
| 10  | The committee gave only _____ approval because several safety documents still needed to be reviewed.                            |